"The Executive Committee and the chairmen of the other committees have met frequently to discuss the work of the association. Their problems have not all been easy, and they must at times have been a burden, particularly so to our president, who has had so much the larger part to bear. She has, however, brought to the task all of her geal, enthusiasm and executive ability, and the results speak for themselves in no uncertain tones."

THE PRESIDENT'S REPORT.

The annual report of the president of the association, Mrs. B. B. Valentine, was one of the most interesting papers submitted, It gave a summary of the work during the year, and made several important suggestions. It reads as follows:

submitted. It gave a summary of the work during the year, and made several important suggestions. It reads as follows:

Richmond Education Association, at the close of its third year of work, may well be congratulated on the results as complished along several lines, but chiefly in the creation of an atmosphere favorable to the production of cood schools and effective teaching, for it must be swident to the most casual observer that there has been a marked increase in the interest shown by the citizens at large in the great question of public education. The discussions and lectures of this association, not to speak of the wonderful conference held here in April, have undentably brought to the consciousness of sur people a sense of the enormous value of education and its vital connection with the welfare of the State. This interest has been shown not only in the larger membership of the association and in the increasing regard in which it is held by the community, now that its sims are more fully understood, but also in very concrete form in the appropriation by the City Council of $5,000 for kindergartens and manual training in the public schools, potwithstanding the extraordinary expenditure necessary in other directions. This we trust is but the beginning of greater things for the future, for there should be a kindergarten in every school, white and colored, and a complete system of manual training extending through all the grades into the high school.

Mr. W. A. Crenshaw and Mr. John B. Minor, members of the Council and Board of Aldermen, respectively, were most in teligent and enthusiastic champions of the cause, and we feel that the city owes them a debt of gratitude for bringing the matter to a successful issue this year. The association, from its inception, has worked for this end, believing that the school should not only give instruction in certain studies, but should also be responsible for training in citizenship, and that the foundations for such training could not be more solidly laid than in that

The rent of the rooms for the junior di senior classes of the Training School as paid by the association this year, if we should undoubtedly contribute ill more next year to the support of an attution of such value to this commutation, and thus relieve our generous friend New York, Miss Fairchild, of a part the burden she has carried for the st two years.

in New York, Miss Fairchild, of a part of the burden she has carried for the ast two years.

The efforts of the association in behalf of increased normal facilities for the raining of women as teachers have not poeci so successful as we could have desired, but we are gratified to see that the Legislature, though not providing for another normal school, has at least materially increased its appropriation to the Furnville Normal School for Women, and we shall continue to agitate the question of the necessity for adequate facilities for the training of teachers in Virginia. Our women are ready and easer for such an education, as witness the hundreds who flock to the summer schools at Charatesville and elsewhere, in order to better equip themselves for their work. In every other department of life we icemand the trained specialist. Why hould we be indifferent when the development of the mind and heart of a child invilved? WASHINGTON, May 23.—Minister Equiers, at Havana, has notified the State Department of the signing yesterday by Mr. Zaldo and himself of the treaty giving effect to the Platt amendment. This amendment had already been enacted by Congress and has been included in the Cuban Constitution and this reduction of the famous amendment to the form of the treaty is next to the last step, which will consist of its ratification by the United States Senate and the Cuban Senate.

The new treaty is in forms no more than an exact reproduction of the Platt amendment. It does not specifically deal with the question of coaling stations, which has already been settled as far as possible at this time by a separate treaty now awaiting the ratification of the Cuban Senate, but not requiring action by the United States Senate. Next in order among the things to be dealt with is that relating to the Isle of Pines and Mr. Squiers will probably proceed at once with negotiations. Harvard Met Deteat.

CAMBRIDGE MASS. May 23.—Harvard met defeat at the hands of Princeton on Soldiers' Field this afternoon by the score of 6 to 5. Until the eighth inning Harvard could not score, although getting men to second and third bases. In the first half of the eighth inning the grandstand back of the catcher was seen to catch fire, and there was a scramble in the seats to the ground. We found, as usual, strong allies in our daily newspapers, which can always he relied on to further a good cause; in fact, on all sides help was given wherever needed and Richmond surpassed herself in generous hospitality in opening wide her doors to the hundreds of guests who poured into the city from the North, as well as the South and who returned to their widely scattered homes loud in her praises.

I have recently received a letter from a gentleman in Montgomery, Ala., stating that they wished to organize in that city an education association similar to ours; that they admired the work done, and the good accomplished by our excellent organization and wished to imitate our example. I am glad to report the same as true of Danville, and hope that the work will take hold in many other towns of the State.

The Education Association, having proved in this last venture the value of co-operation—of welding together the sentiered forces of a community and contentrating them upon one strategic point—should make good use of this new-found power, and in the coming year lose no time in taking up some practical work for

Crowd of Urchins Swarmed Streets About the County C. H. Last Night.

Deputy Sheriff Voegler, of Henrico county, and others in the vicinity of the courthouse were treated to a great sight last night from about 8 to 9 o'clock. The story of the possibility of the sheriff bringing down some of Bostock's animals as prisoners to the fall, beause the showman was alleged to have failed to restore the building to the condition in which had found it, had spread over the clty, and between 400 and 500 children, white and colored, mostly boys, had gathered to see them come in. If Mr. Voegler was asked once, "When are the animals coming?" he was asked the same question a hundred times, and shally he told the juvenile gathering that they would not arrive until 3 A. M. This had the effect of scattering the boys, but they all "went away sorrowful," and many of them expressed deep regret that they had been disappointed in their expectations.

Mr. Voegler enjoyed the sight for a while, but as the hour grew late and the coise greater, the popular deputy shering the little while all was quitet once more around the courthouse and jail.

The boys were very enthissastic at times, and when a horse could be seen approaching in the distance they would mistake him for a lion or any old animal and give a regular Indian yell. As a matter of fact, the animals were not taken to the courthouse, and whatever the result of the fittachment proceedings against the Bostock animals now in the hands of the carpival company, they will not be removed from the grounds until to-morrow. Interlocked deer horns, from the heads of two bigs bucks that fought to the death on the banks of McGinn Creek, are on exhibition in the show window of Doyle & LaLonde's show store. The interlocked horns were found near the Rayburn Dann, forty miles west of Alpena, on the opening day of the brook trout season, by W. B. Dobson, editor of the Eche.

The larger of the two sets of horns has sixteen points, and is one of the largest ever seen in Northern Michigan. The buck that wore the horns weighed over 800 pounds.

When found the horns were attached to the skulls of the two animals and were buried in the mud alongside of McFinn Creek on a beaver meadow. The skeletons were also buried in the mud. Deer hunters who have seen the interlocked borns say the larger of the two sets of horns was probably worn by "Old Erim" a famous big buck that had been shot at hundreds of times. He secaped the inany builest fired at him only to die in a flerce battle with another buck. The fight probably occurred about a year ago.—Alpena Evening Echo.

ing of loblolly pine seedlings collected in the forest on a tract of 169 acros of open woods. Two hundred and eighty acres wil be planted with chesinit and white and post oak. A seed bed will be prepared for the raising of loblolly pine for a tract of 649 acres, as it is considered not advisable to use entirely stock collected from the forest.

All this planting is based on the fact that while immense quantities of loblolly are being cut in that locality, there is little or no reproduction on the land in question, due chiefly to annual fires set to improve the pasture. Mr. Ahlrichs will have a fire patrol system.

It is purposed also to treat a tract of 640 acres to improve the natural reproduction by the prevention of fires.

Labor may be obtained at $15 per month, hence the work can be done at very small cost. It is estimated that the planting will cost only from $2 to $13 per acre.

Scarcely had George Gould taken hold of the vast interests entrusted to his care than he had a serious altercation with J. Gould left Morgan's offices much angered, and is said never to have entered them again from that day to this. One of Jay Gould's intimate frie ds, nearing of this circumstance, volunteered a bit of advices to the young man in about these words:

"George, as an admirer of your father, and as one interested in your highest welfare, I seriously hope you will not commit the blunder at the beginning of your career, of antagonizing the leading interests in the business world."

George said nothing, but evidently it sent him to thinking. That "remarkable business ability." for which a fond father gave him credit, not long afterward developed in a way that showed he was possessed of an acuteness that no one dreamed of. If he should not antagonize thought he, he should make alliances with the great powers in the business world. But he had broken with Morgan.
